ST. MATTHEW'S ACADEMY HOLDS ANNUAL EXERCISES

Military and Athletic Competitions, Banquet and Dance Features

The annual St. Matthew's Day exercises were celebrated at the St. Matthew's Military Academy in Burlingame Saturday. It was also the occasion for the yearly reunion of the old graduates, and 250 alumni who had left the school at various times since the graduation of the first class in 1866, gathered around the banquet table and exchanged reminiscences of school days.

The programme of the day offered a splendid entertainment for the graduates, students and friends of the school. In the morning a field meet was given on the athletic field and contests were held for medals presented by the alumni association. This was followed by a review and dress parade of the cadet corps. The young soldiers made a splendid showing in the different exercises, drills and company movements. Captain H. N. Royden, military instructor at the school, was in command, and the cadets were reviewed by Major H. B. P. Boody, N. G. C.

After the luncheon to the old graduates and guests, addresses were given by members of the alumni. Among the speakers were W. S. Coleman, Earl Webb, Rev. James Lincoln, Rev. W. W. Calfee, W. S. Sharpstein, Lester Summerford and Rev. W. A. Brewer, rector of the school. Twenty graduates, all of whom had left the school more than twenty-five years ago, shouldered muskets and gave an exhibition drill. It was under the old "Upton's Tactics," which was taught in those days, and the veterans went through the drill with remarkable precision. A dance concluded the day's programme.

The following is the result of the military and athletic competition for which the alumni medals were offered:

100-yard dash—Jackson first, Gammon second, Sutton third.

100-yard dash, juniors—Borda first, Erickson second, Estes third.

Seventy-five-yard dash—Tyler Hall—Jennings first, Clement second, Belz third.

220-yard dash, seniors—Sutton first, Jackson second, W. H. Brewer third.

440-yard dash—Sutton first, W. H. Brewer second, Hoag, third.

Broad jump—Gammon first, Jackson second, Sutton third.

High jump—Jackson first, Mahoney second, Garnett third.

Equipment race—Garnett first, Bradley second, Bradley third.

Kicking the football—Morris first, Bacon second, Cadman third.

Competitive drill—P. Lew first, P. Brewer second.

Competitive drill, recruits—W. Calsee first, Cameron second.

Exhibition high jump by George Horine, holder of world's record.

SAN MATEO COUNTY'S EXHIBIT AT LAND SHOW

Development Association Arranging for Magnificent Display

Preparations for the big Land Show to be held in San Francisco next month are being made by the San Mateo County Development Association, which has successfully undertaken the task of interesting local enterprises in making this exhibit.

The county's exhibition row will have a frontage of 90 feet, with a depth of 12 feet, making 1080 square feet in all. The favorable location secured will make it one of the spots that cannot be overlooked.

Every square inch of the floor space will be utilized to the utmost advantage. Experts connected with the Land Show will be on hand to assist the county's various exhibitors in arranging their displays.

Owing to the strategic position of San Mateo county's space, the officials connected with the Land Show are bending every energy toward making this the most talked of county display, realizing that first impressions gained by the stranger are lasting.

The scheme of decoration carried out is highly original and novel. The four large tents, covering an area of 100,000 square feet, are already up. As one approaches the main entrance on Market street, his eye meets what appears to be the trunk of a giant redwood. From this point a tunnel leads to the main tent, carrying out the idea of one traveling through the center of a huge redwood tree for which the State is world famed. The interior decorations typify a redwood forest, all the tent-poles being covered with redwood bark from which branches spring forth, giving a realistic effect.

Between the boughs of the scenic trees will be strung thousands of electric bulbs with boral shades representing the California poinsettia.

Hundreds of thousands of visitors from distant points will see the county's display. It will be the aim of the officials of the San Mateo County Development Association to encourage the stranger to visit the county so that he may view the beauties that nature has lavished here. He will be told of the beautiful home sites, the lakes, the mountains, valleys and miles of beaches washed by the great Pacific Ocean.

The exhibitors are striving to make this the greatest display ever attempted by them.

The Portola celebration and parade, which will be held during the last week of the Land Show, calls attention to the historical importance of San Mateo county.

It is to be remembered that Don Gaspar de Portola, first governor of California, and his sturdy band of followers, marching overland from San Diego, sighted the Bay of San Francisco from the hills of what is now known as Half Moon Bay. At the foot of Montara mountain, where they camped during October, 1769, now stands a monument erected in their honor. No doubt many visitors will make a pilgrimage to this spot, which is held sacred in the memory of all Californians and which is the special pride of the Coast Side.

EDITOR IS LIFE SAVER

George E. Dunn, editor of the Coast Side Comet, has taken on added glory in the new role of life-saver. Last Sunday while Mrs. Albert J. Evans of San Francisco, who was spending a vacation in Moss Beach, was enjoying a dip in the surf, she was attacked by an octopus which fastened its tentacles about her and almost made away with her into deep water. Editor Dunn and Wm. Grosskurth, proprietor of the Marine View hotel, rushed to the rescue of Mrs. Evans and, after a fierce struggle with the monster, succeeded in effecting a rescue, but not until all three persons were almost exhausted.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION

The following articles of incorporation were filed in the county clerk's office during the week:

L. Thomson, I. H. Lahman, Felix Santallier, Sam J. Eva and

PRIZE POULTRY YARD ON THE COAST SIDE RAIDED

Raising Fancy Birds as a Diversion Costly to Mussel Rock Man

When J. E. Barnes of Mussel Rock went into poultry raising as a diversion he took the work up so competently that before he, himself, was aware, he had very finely stocked poultry yards. He raises turkeys, chickens and ducks.

Many a favored guest sat down to a chicken dinner prepared by the skillful hand which directs the culinary department of the Mussel Rock establishment. Not an effeminate hand, for Mr. Barnes has not yet surrendered command of the citadel, no matter how strong the contending forces have been.

The main trouble about the chicken dinners is that it was discovered the Mussel Rock poultry feeds were not confined to the Mussel Rock table. One by one these fine fowls disappeared from their familiar haunts and then they went in flocks, and the climax came when a fine prize turkey gobbler was found missing.

If the looters of the roost had let well enough alone—but here is where that laggard, Justice, begins her work. In some way the Ocean Shore Railroad chanced to see these poultry fanciers, then Constable "Duck" Sullivan found the bird in a refrigerator in Daly City. The last we heard of the offenders they were before Judge Ellis C. Johnson, who gave the fellow 60 days, with a suspension of sentence to enable him to leave town before 6 o'clock that evening.—Coast Side Comet.

WHAT MR. BRYAN SHOULD DO

Mr. Bryan should take the advice of his host of Republican friends and relinquish the post of Secretary of State. What we require in that portfolio, which is properly the fountain head of the diplomacy of the entire country, is a little more hypocrisy, a little more sophistry, a little more indirectness. Mr. Bryan is much too direct in his methods. He is too much given to taking the public into his confidence. He does not know how to hold cards in his sleeve. He is too ready to do what he thinks without regard to its effect on the sensibilities of Republican editors who have been used to something else. If his salary is not large enough, he should not seek to eke it out by methods which are open, above board and above suspicion. He should put up the conventional American bluff and say nothing about it. Instead of talking to Chautauquas, he should use some advance government information to take a flyer or two in Wall Street, or he should help some of his relatives to grab valuable bits of public property, or he should establish an umbilical connection with a railroad corporation or a group of financiers or a protected manufacturer. He should act as if he had never done an honest day's work in his life. He should learn and take advantage of the fact that the more devious a route an income takes the more honored its possessor is apt to be.—Ellis O. Jones, in Life.

HIS REWARD

Beneath this stone there lies at rest a man who always did his best. The gods ordained that he should move along a lowly, humble groove. For him there was no wealth or fame, he bore no proud ancestral name, no palace doors for him swung wide, but in his hut he lived and died. He fashioned lumber, and the boards made shelter for the languid lords. He fed the cows and herded swine that other men might nobly dine. His feet were seamed with bramble scars that others might have motor cars. From early dawn till close of day he toiled along his weary way, and took his earnings in his hand to give to those who owned the land. This strip of land is his reward—'twas given by his over-lord. It's six feet long and three feet wide, and here they brought him when he died. To labor hard for fifty years, endure the burdens and the tears, to have no grateful hours of rest, but toil and strive and do your best. To toil and moil and strive and save, and in the end to get a grave! Alas for those who work and grope, and go through life and have no hope!—Sydney Labor Leader.

It's hard for the two-faced person to look you in the eye.

COAST SIDE OF SAN MATEO CO.

What Our Neighbors Along the Pacific's Shore Have Been Doing, Are Doing and Will Do

The vegetable growers of the Coast Side have expended more than $50,000 the past year in sinking wells for water to be used for irrigation. A number of wells drilled deliver 24,000 gallons per hour and stand continued pumping.

The San Mateo Produce Co. of Half Moon Bay has leased several hundred acres of land on the Coast Side and will plant it to peas and beans, which will be used by a cannery to be established at once in Half Moon Bay. A. Puccinilli, president of the company, announces that the company will can 50,000 dozen cans of these vegetables next year. Instead of hundreds of acres used this year, thousands of acres will be planted next year.

A High School Band with 15 pieces has been organized by the high school boys at Half Moon Bay. This band is receiving considerable financial and other encouragement from the business men of that place.

Forest fires are burning in the Pescadero country and it is feared that over 40,000 acres of timber land will be destroyed. Also the town of Pescadero is in danger. Hundreds of fire fighters are at work.

D. Davis of San Francisco is purchasing 20 lots at Princeton from Frank P. Brophy, the owner. Mr. Davis has parties who will build a big hotel and install all kinds of amusements for the entertainment of the many visitors to this popular resort.

The voters of the Montara Lighting District voted to organize by a vote of 62 to 8. One hundred street lights will light the people to and from their homes within the next two months.

J. J. Gomes of Half Moon Bay has announced the purchase of Jack Healy's interest in the Princeton Hotel and a 25-room addition will be added to the same by the summer of 1914. Alex. Bonzani, the noted chef, will retain his interest and will give the patrons of this hotel the best cooked Italian meals to be found anywhere on the coast.

Harr Wagner, managing editor of the Western Journal of Education, a prominent Coast Sider, did his first journalistic work on an old Mechanics Fair Daily.

Rev. Father A. Andriano of Half Moon Bay was in San Francisco the early part of the week transacting church business.

Albert Bester of Montara has discovered that he has an unlimited supply of turf on his ranch. He has tried his turf (soil) and found that it makes a good fire and expects to supply the San Francisco market with the same. Mr. Bester will mold this fire dirt into bricks and ship it in that form.

C. D. Smith is about to give his cottage at Half Moon Bay a coat of new paint.—Comet. So much more thoughtful than to use old paint.

The management of the Ocean Shore Furniture Company, whose factory is at Moss Beach, has announced the construction of an addition to their factory of 50x140.

Ralph McCormick of Pescadero, who had two fingers shot off two weeks ago and who has been a patient at the Red Cross Hospital under the care of Dr. Ferrin of Half Moon Bay, is about to return to his home.

C. B. Smith, who is securing subscriptions for the telephone, reports that he has 43 Coast Side Triangle citizens signed up for phones. Not bad for a few days' work.

Manuel Costa, a pioneer who came to Half Moon Bay 45 years ago, died at his home in that place on Sept. 24th. The deceased was 85 years old and a native of Portugal. He leaves the following children to mourn his departure: Mrs. Annie Azevedo, Mrs. Mary Azevedo, Mrs. Carrie Patricio, Mrs. Bell Vallentine, Mrs. Gussie Patricio and Miss Margaret Costa.

When the actual work on the Coast Boulevard should be commenced we were to celebrate. Now the time has arrived. When, where and how shall we celebrate? It must be an occasion with plenty of rejoicing and get-together spirit. If you will review the past we haven't had a social time in our recent history. Why can't we make this one of the memorable ones in attendance, interest and enthusiasm.—Comet.

Miss Beatrice Johns of San Francisco is visiting Mrs. Canfield. Miss Johns is an elocutionist of much ability and gave some fine selections at the entertainment last week, given by Mr. and Mrs. Canfield for the benefit of the church here.

The Coast Side Comet suggests the public ownership of a water system is a matter worthy of the present attention of our residents.

Mr. Hickmont, the Sacramento cannery man, who was the first man to put up asparagus in any quantity, has founded an artichoke cannery at Half Moon Bay and is making a big success of it.

Dr. C. L. Morgan of Half Moon Bay was in San Francisco Wednesday buying goods for his dry goods store.

Mrs. Maier's new house on 4th St. is progressing rapidly. The contractor, F. L. Richardson, has a large crew of men at work on it and from the appearance of things, will complete the job by October 20.

With the installation of the new telephone exchange on the Coast Side, the central office will be located at the Comet building, Moss Beach, and Miss Annie Smith, the enterprising business woman who has myriads of friends, will be the chief operator.

GOVERNMENT RAILWAY IN ALASKA OBJECT OF BILL

Congress Working on $35,000,000 Appropriation for Construction

With a favorable report of the House Committee on Territories on Government-owned railroads in Alaska, the prospects of the territory getting transportation facilities within a few years become excellent.

The Senate has passed a bill appropriating $40,000,000 for government-owned railroads in Alaska. The House caucus undoubtedly will soon give permission to the Territories Committee to report the bill to the House, where it will be placed on the calendar and will be one of the first pieces of legislation taken up at the next session.

Representative Curry of the Territories Committee was designated a sub-committee of one to prepare estimates of the cost of an Alaskan railroad and his estimate of $35,000,000 was accepted by the committee.

A government owned railroad in Alaska, which now seems to be certain of becoming a reality, will exert profound economic changes on the Pacific Coast. The Pacific Coast uses approximately 85,000,000 tons of coal annually, and of this amount 40,000,000 tons is eastern coal.

With a railroad making the vast Alaska coal fields available, coal on the Pacific Coast, according to members of the committee, will become $2 to $4 per ton cheaper to the consumer. The navy will be able to save $4 to $5 per ton by using Alaska coal.

The House bill provides that the President shall appoint all officials to have charge of the construction of the road, which must be built from "tidewater ports to navigable inland water in the territory. The road is expected to open great gold fields that are now inaccessible and it will result in a great and immediate increase in Alaska's population.

BUILDING CONTRACTS

The following builders contracts were filed in the County Recorder's office during the week:

Weeden Bros. agree to erect for the trustees of the grammar school district at Menlo Park in 90 days a school building for $18,979.

APPRAISERS APPOINTED

Judge Buck has appointed the following appraisers in the following estates:

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

John G. Anderson, New Golfing Star.

JOHN G. ANDERSON.

The recent contest for the national amateur golf championship title at Garden City, N. Y., won by Jerome P. Travers of Upper Montclair, N. J., brought out a new stellar figure in the world of golf. He is John G. Anderson of Massachusetts, who won his way through to the finals, where he was defeated by the three time champion.

Anderson's playing demonstrated that he is one of the greatest players the game has ever produced. He is a college professor and has won the Massachusetts state championship title twice.

A Foolish Athlete.

Tom Burrows, the Australian all around athlete and champion club swinger, collapsed at the Earl's court exhibition in London in an attempt to swing three and one-half pound clubs 100 hours continuously. He succeeded in keeping the clubs in motion for ninety seven hours and thirty-five minutes and then dropped over.

Last April Burrows swung a pair of three pound six ounce Indian clubs for more than 100 hours, but later became delirious.

Western League News.

President Norris O'Neill of the Western league has signed Edward Woods of Lincoln, Neb., as an umpire. Manager Dale Gear of the Topeka club has announced the recall of Pitcher McCullough and Infielder Smiser of the Grand Island (Nebraska State league) team. The Lincoln club has unconditionally released Outfielder Mike Donovan, secured from the Central league a month ago.

End of Racing Suit.

With the consent of the attorneys for both sides Judge Lacombe, in the United States district court in New York city, dismissed the suit brought by Curly Brown's Maryland State Fair association to enjoin the Jockey Club of America from exercising control over horse racing in any place outside of New York state.

The motion for dismissal was made by the plaintiff.

Peltz to Lead Kansas City.

Heine Peltz, who has been acting as coach for the St. Louis National league team this season, has been appointed manager of the Kansas City club of the American association, according to an announcement. He takes up his new duties at once, St. Louis granting him his release. Peltz formerly managed Louisville in the association.

To Turn Professional.

Abe Mitchell, the English amateur golfer, who has entered for the American amateur golf championship at Garden City, N. Y., has announced his intention of becoming a professional as soon as he is offered a suitable position. He was the runner up for the British amateur championship last year.

Conroy Goes to Elmira.

William (Wild) E. Conroy, formerly of the Washington American league team and for two seasons with Rochester in the International league, was released to Elmira, N. Y., recently, subject to International league waivers. It is understood that Conroy will manage the team next year, vice Lew Ritter.

Points for Mothers

The Child Beautiful.

No matter what a fond mother declares she wishes the fairy godmother to bestow on her child at its birth, in her heart of hearts she wishes her child to be beautiful. No amount of wishing seems to have any power in the matter, and what the fates decree has to be submitted to. No matter whether the beauty be much or little, it is impossible to add to it, but with care it can be preserved, for, sad to relate, many people spoil their good looks in early childhood through being allowed to form undesirable habits of those funny little ways which are peculiar to the early stages of life.

Who is there who has not revelled in the delight of the pastime which grownups call "gargoyling"? It consists in making the face fascinatingly ugly by stretching the mouth to its fullest extent, pushing the nose up and pulling the ears forward. It is disastrous to the very young, who by this means obtain very premature wrinkles and find their ears permanently outstanding. It should be severely discouraged in young children, and on no account should such antics be rewarded by a smile, no matter how comical the child may look.

Similarly the frowns of bad temper should be avoided, and this can only be done by removing the cause. Temper, whether of the passionate or the sulky variety, is largely a matter of habit, and a very undesirable one, too, but a child must be taken in hand at a very early age if it is to be taught to control its temper. A child's feelings are all on the surface, and it is easily possible to divert the mind to some other subject than that which caused the outburst of temper. Sulkiness generally arises from resentment on the part of an elder. It is extremely infectious, and the parent who sulks with a child need not be astonished if the child shows symptoms of the same complaint.

Another trick of childhood which is also associated with bad temper is the dangerous habit of biting the nails. The ill result, which is apparent to all, is short and ugly finger nails, which can never be made beautiful again, even by the most skillful manicurists. The real danger of the habit, however, lies in the sharpness of the small particles swallowed, which are quite capable of giving rise to an attack of appendicitis.

Connected with the fingers also is the habit of thumb sucking, which commences when the gums are swollen and painful at the time of cutting the teeth. At the earliest signs of thumb sucking the thumb should be taken out and a rubber ring given as a substitute, or, better still, the child should be given a little drop of cold water to drink. It seems hard to check a habit which may soothe and comfort a young child, but there is the future to be considered, and a continuance of the habit leaves its mark in an ugly, pointed thumb and deformed mouth, in which the upper lip and the top teeth are unduly projecting, while the lower parts of the mouth are receding.

The evils arising from sucking a "dummy" resemble those of thumb sucking as far as deformity of the mouth is concerned, and with both there is the evil of overexcited salivary glands through the constant sucking. It would be a good thing if the sale of this injurious article were illegal, as in France.

Nursery Quilts.

Distinctive quilts for the little tots' room are a joy to the children and a delightful task for mothers. They are very expensive if bought and less individual, of course. Here are a few ideas for the homemaker designs that will make nursery quilts things to be remembered in after years, besides being present joys.

The flower quilt always holds great attraction for youngsters. If the nursery is carpeted in daisy paper the carrying out of this idea is one of the easiest things imaginable. On a foundation of silk poplin, or, best of all, unbleached muslin, arrange the daisies in a straight border, the stems growing from a plain band on the edge of the quilt, continuing around the four sides.

To make the daisies, cut an oval four inches long and one inch at its greatest width. Make a pattern of a petal three inches by about three-quarters of an inch. Cut out sixteen of these from white muslin if your background is a color. Make the center yellow in this case. If you are going to have yellow petals the center should be a golden brown.

Stems in this quilt should be straight, with here and there a leaf.

Arrange the petals around the center—under it—and place the stem under one edge. Sew around the edges without turning in, using the sewing machine or quick running stitches by hand.

This is a very attractive design, the idea being capable of many different treatments in the field of flowers. Poppies, tulips, roses, daffodils, clematis may be used, and one flower quilt has a huge basket, upset, from which are tumbling in confusion dear to the child's heart all kinds of blossoms that spread out to the corners of the quilt. In this pattern all colors of materials are used. The variegated effect is of continuous interest to the little owner.

Wedding Bells For Ananias

The Story of His "Deep Trouble"

By EDITH L. WINSTON

It was several months after Ananias Sline went to board with the Widow Rowell that I journeyed down to Quince Harbor to spend golden October days in the cozy home of Captain Barnabas Fish and his good wife Maria, nee Weeks.

"And how is your friend Ananias Sline?" I asked the jovial captain as we sat around the supper table the night of my arrival.

"Ananias? Miss Telham, ma'am," said the captain gravely. "Ananias Sline is in deep trouble."

"Now, Barnabas Fish," protested Maria, but a smile crinkled around her merry eyes.

"Trouble?" I echoed. "Not trouble at the bank?" for Ananias occupied the dignified and responsible position of porter and man of all work in the First Bank of Quince Harbor.

"Dear me, no—matrimonial trouble," responded the captain.

"I did not know that Ananias was married," said I.

"He isn't, but the knot's to be tied—when, Maria?"

"Hettie says next Wednesday."

"Aye," chuckled the captain. "Hettie Rowell says the knot's to be tied next Wednesday in the First Methodist church, but Ananias, he says, never!"

"So it's the Widow Rowell who has captured the affections of Ananias Sline?" I mused.

"She's captured him, all right, but he's swearing he'll cast off and steer a course for China. I've been through three tantrums with him this week."

"AH-H-H!" SCREECHED THE WIDOW ROWELL.

and he says he'd rather be a corpse—a dead corpse—than a bridegroom. He came to me in great distress six weeks ago, and says he: 'Cap'n, I'm going to slip my cable, and you're the only one that'll know the truth. The Widow Rowell's bound I shall marry her, and I'd rather be a dead corpse.'"

"She can't marry you if you never asked her," I says to him, and he screamed at me: 'She can't, eh? You don't know her then?'

"Then I up and asked him if he did ask her to marry him, and he says he never did, never thought of it, didn't want to and would be confounded if he would."

There was a knock at the door. Maria opened it to admit a rather round shouldered, elderly woman, whose weakened face was set in a perpetual smile that showed even rows of false teeth. Her gray hair was drawn up into a knot on top of her head, and a pink bow was pinned coquettishly over one ear.

"Well, Mrs. Rowell," greeted the captain as she entered the sitting room and shook hands with me, "how goes everything?"

"Beautifully!" exclaimed the bride to be, her smile widening. "I came over to ask Maria's advice. I suppose they have told you, Miss Telham?" she simpered.

"Yes, and you must allow me to wish you happiness," I said.

"Thank you, dearie," she said sweetly. "Ananias is certainly a rare man."

"He is indeed," I replied.

"But shy," went on the widow thoughtfully, fixing one of her little dark eyes on me while the other squinted obliquely at Captain Barnabas. "Why, he says, says he: 'Dear Hettie, I'd rather be walking to my own funeral than to be going up the aisle of the church to my wedding,' says he. It affects me that way."

"He will recover his nerve at the last moment," I cheered her.

"He's got to get over it," she said, with such deadly sweetness in her tone that I began to feel rather sorry for Ananias.

Maria came into the room fresh and tidy from her dishwashing. She picked up some knitting, and her needles clicked busily.

"What you going to wear, Hettie?" asked Maria practically.

"White," replied Mrs. Rowell calmly. "I've thought it all out, Maria. I wore white for my first bridal when I married Jasper Jones. Then, being a widow, I wore gray when I married Henry Rowell. Now I feel like I've swung back to first place again, and so I've concluded I'll wear white."

"And now, captain, how about you standing up with Ananias at his wedding?" She smiled playfully at him. From nowhere in particular came a hollow voice that answered the widow's question.

"Palbearer!" was its ominous suggestion.

The Widow Rowell screamed and closed her eyes. The captain glanced wildly around, and I confess that I was startled. Only Maria knitted on calmly, unconcernedly.

"Why, what was that?" I asked.

"What was what?" asked Maria in a surprised sort of way.

Mrs. Rowell sat up, and sparks flashed from her eyes in all directions. Her rather hooked nose almost appeared to meet her sharp upturning chin.

"I thought I heard something," she said, still smiling.

"I heard a tree toad outside in the flock bush, ma'am," said the captain innocently.

"Go on with your story, Hettie," urged Maria.

"I'm rather upset," confessed the widow, after a moment's hesitation. "I kinder thought it sounded like the warning voice of Henry Rowell. Henry was a very jealous husband, though he had no cause to be," she added hastily.

"Most husbands are jealous of their handsome wives," said the captain gallantly.

The widow simpered sweetly at him. "You are a case, Barnabas Fish!" she chided archly. "I was asking you if you would stand up with Ananias Wednesday, be his best man?"

"Palbearer!" croaked the hollow voice.

"Will you?" persisted the widow, but her face was pale.

"Of course," said the captain in a hearty voice. "I'll stand by the bridegroom."

"Corpse!" rattled the hollow voice.

But the widow was undaunted as yet. She had set her heart on surprising Quince Harbor by her unexpected wedding to the porter in the bank, and she was not to be frightened out of it by the spiritual warnings of a dead and gone spouse or a tree toad, but the widow had leanings toward spiritualism. It was a cult that attracted her romantic nature.

"We will drive around after you and Maria," went on the widow doggedly. "We're going to have Al Murray's back!"

"Hearse!" interpolated the hollow voice.

"And I've bought the wedding ring!"

"Casket!" came the interruption.

"Ah-h-h-h-h-h!" screeched the Widow Rowell, and she went at once into violent hysterics.

Maria and I flew around, applying remedies to her nose, while the captain tiptoed out to the kitchen stairway that led to the loft overhead, and I heard his deep voice rumbling. Sometimes it was broken by chuckles and again by another voice disagreeably high pitched.

At last the widow came to, looking yellow than ever, but there was a new light in her shifty eyes. They blazed with excitement, and her toll worn hands trembled.

"Maria," said she solemnly, "I've had a warning. I shan't marry Ananias—not yet, maybe not at all. I'll wait, and you'll bear in mind that when it happens you and Barnabas'll stand up with us just the same!"

"Palbearers!" came in a hoarse whisper.

Mrs. Rowell trembled, but her wide smile did not relax. It was fixed as though painted there.

"You see, Maria and Barnabas and Miss Telham," she said almost pathetically, including all three in a swift zizzzag glance, "I'm considerable shook up now, and I want to study up on this spirit business before I go ahead."

"Cheer up, Hettie," said the captain, grasping her hand warmly. "By next June you and Ananias will be signing papers and setting sail on a pleasant sea of—er—matrimony!"

"Maybe!" The widow's tone was enigmatic. As she opened the door to depart she added in her customary manner: "I'm glad I didn't announce it to any one else, and I guess I'll go home and stir up some cornmeal griddle-cakes for Mr. Sline's breakfast. I've got to do something to make up to him for his disappointment."

"And a man's heart being by way of his stomach, why, you're taking the right tack," approved Maria.

When we were alone Maria fixed her bright eyes on her husband's twinkling blue ones.

"How long has Ananias been up in the kitchen loft?" she asked.

"Since before dinner," answered the captain. "He came all a-tremble, saying he'd hang himself if he wasn't saved, and I didn't know what to do about it. It so happened the widow came in tonight, and I guess Ananias' feelings got the best of him, and he jest naturally figured out a course for himself and sailed into a safe harbor. He's gone back to the widder's now, feeling pretty secure that she won't marry him yet awhile."

"By the way, Maria," he added, "Ananias says he found a punkin pie and a pitcher of lemonade up in the loft, and he et 'em up. I wonder how they came up there?"

"I took 'em up myself after dinner," smiled Maria triumphantly, and I did not blame Captain Barnabas when he kissed her warmly.

HELPFUL HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES

Seam Ripper Attachment For Sewing Machines.

To save valuable time for busy seamstresses a Virginia woman has designed a ripper attachment for sewing machines. Usually when a woman wants to rip a seam in a garment she searches about for scissors and laboriously opens the stitches. This attachment consists of an arm that is pivotally fixed to the lower end of the needle bar and has a horizontal cutting blade mounted on it. When not in use this arm can be pushed up and back out of the way. When needed it can be pulled down in a second, and the seamstress can open the seam without having to practically stop work and look for other tools. She can thus alternately sew and rip without only a few inches to go from one mechanism to the other.

Testing the Oven's Heat.

To test the oven have ready some pieces of ordinary white kitchen paper and try the oven by putting in one every eight or ten minutes. If on being put in the paper blackens or even blazes up at once the oven is obviously too hot. If on being left in, however, for two minutes or so the paper turns a deep, almost chocolate brown the oven is ready for puddies and small pastries generally. If the paper turns a Havana or cigar brown, turns, vol auvents and such like may be put in. If the paper simply turns a pale yellowish brown, the shade of a deal plank, the oven is fit for bread, large meat or game pies, poundcake, etc.—in short, anything requiring a good sound or "soaking" oven, the perfect one for baking. If finally the paper when left in the oven for the prescribed time is barely tinged with a very faint shade of yellow, sponge cakes, meringues and such things needing but light baking and little if any coloring may be safely left in.

Kitchen Wisdom.

Rubbers on fruit cans should never be used after they have become stretched and thin.

All fine linens and pieces of hand-sewn lingerie should be wrung out by hand and never through the wringer.

Sew a good sized pearl button into the corner of the dishcloth for a convenient help in cleansing saucers.

Finger marks may be removed from varnished furniture by rubbing with sweet oil.

Custard dishes or cups may be prevented from cracking when boiling custard is poured into them by placing the dish or cup on a damp cloth.

Uses For Worn Towels.

Worn huckaback or Turkish towels can be made into serviceable wash cloths. They can be hemmed by hand or by machine or finished with a row of featherstitching. Another way to use old towels is to sew two together neatly about the edges and catch them with strong thread two or three times in the middle and so make one strong towel. Old Turkish towels when they are too worn for any other use make very good floor cloths.

One Crust Cream Apple Pie.

Line a pie tin with rich crust, cover bottom crust with good cooking apples, cover well with sugar, sprinkle of flour. Dot butter well over top and sprinkle well with cinnamon when half baked. Take two-thirds cupful of pure sweet cream, pour over and finish baking till a golden brown. Eat when cold.

A Sewing Hint.

When stitching hems of tucks in children's garments that will likely be lengthened a little later use a finer thread on the bobbin than on the spool; also lengthen the stitch a trifle. If stitched in this way it will be found very easy to rip the hems or other seams when the necessity arises.

Sally Lunn Short Cake.

One tablespoonful of butter, scant three-fourths cupful of sugar, one egg, one-half cupful of milk, one cupful of flour and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Beat till light, pour in greased tin, sprinkle berries or cherries over the top and bake. Serve with cream and sugar.

Renovating Feathers.

Wings and quilts that have become soiled may be made to look like new in the following manner: Put them in a box filled with cornmeal and shake them gently. When this is finished brush off the meal with a soft brush.

FABRICS THE THING.

Gorgeous Coloring In Materials Never So Pronounced.

COSTUME OF OLD ROSE PEAU DE PETITE.

The chic of the new frocks lies in the fabrics this season. It is the beauty of the coloring and the novelty of the weave in the material that distinguish the best looking costumes, not the line nor the design. The result is a vast amount of materials richer in tone and more original in design than anything that has bewildered the eyes of women in the past.

Of all the silk materials duvetyn (a combination of silk and wool) is at the present moment the most popular. It is claimed that duvetyn is not practical because the silk face causes it to wrinkle easily. For this reason some of the exclusive importers are advising peau de peche, a fine interpretation of velours de laine and in all wool material. It has a high luster, which makes it quite as dressy as duvetyn, and, being wool, it is said not to wrinkle and show the signs of wear quickly.

The very delectable costume seen in the illustration is of peau de peche in a lovely shade of old rose, having the new full tunic skirt effect over a tight skirt of velvet. An oriental embroidered brocade vest crosses in the front of the coat and ends in a broad folded girdle across the back.

School Shoes and Boots.

If the girl who is to spend three or four months at a school so far from home that she cannot economically visit it at stated short intervals is not provided with several extra pairs of shoes and boots she cannot be thoroughly comfortable in so far as her feet are concerned. And the comfort of the feet always reacts upon the mental condition. For wear in the house and in the classrooms there should be three pair of lightweight oxfords, in order that the same ones need not be worn two days in succession, even while one pair is being repaired.

While exercising in the open air during cold weather the boarding school girl should wear quite high topped waterproof boots with heavy soles rather than lightweight shoes under rubbers, as the latter are apt to heat the feet and make them tender if worn for several hours at a time. But as heavy soles take a long time to dry there must necessarily be two or more pairs of such boots always on hand.

The girl who attends the average moderately priced boarding school can get along comfortably with two pair of evening slippers or low cut shoes—one pair in bronze or black kid and the other in white glace or suede. Satin in any shade is much too dressy looking to go with the sort of evening frock that sensible girls pack into their boarding school trunks.

Concerning Women.

W. C. Brownell has given two new prizes to Vassar college in memory of his wife, who was a graduate of the class of 1873. One hundred dollars is to be given each year to the senior holding the highest rank in biology and $100 to the senior holding the highest rank in history and economics.

Delegates from the principal industrial countries of Europe will meet Sept. 15 at Berne, by invitation of the Swiss government, to consider the drafting of an international agreement to prohibit the employment of boys and girls below specified ages and to fix a maximum ten hour day for workers within certain ages.

Refinishing Easy.

A chest of drawers or an old cupboard that is in need of refinishing can be restored by the application of a coat or two of mahogany stain after the old paint or varnish has been removed. In place of the wood or brass handles to the drawers substitute the little glass knobs that adorn real pieces of colonial furniture. The glass knobs cost merely a trifle and are easily screwed into place.

Prince John, Son of the King of England.

By American Press Association.

Prince John, the handsome boy here pictured, is the youngest son of King George V. of England. The little prince was born eight years ago, and the photograph was taken on the anniversary of his last birthday. He has four brothers and one sister and, being the baby, is the pet of the family. His sister, Princess Mary, is devoted to her small brother and spends much of her spare time in aiding him in his studies and as his playmate. Princess Mary is in her seventeenth year and is the third child of King George and Queen Mary. The two boys next older than Prince John are Prince Henry, thirteen years old, and Prince George, who is eleven.

The Kaiser's Meal.

About twenty-five years ago, when the German emperor was traveling in Austria, he found himself very hungry after a hunting trip miles from his destination and food.

"What shall we do?" asked his majesty.

His companion, Count Dolma, remembered a farmhouse not very far away.

"Yes; follow me," he answered, and in a few minutes they stood within the old farmhouse.

"Well, my good woman, what can you give us?" asked the emperor.

The woman placed bread, milk, butter and sausage on the table.

"Milk, bread, butter and sausage!" exclaimed his majesty. "Why, this is a feast fit to set before the king!"

He and his companion started in, and the woman had the satisfaction of seeing her food quickly disappear. Finally the emperor said, "My good woman, take this and go and buy yourself more sausage and more bread," and he placed a golden double eagle in her outstretched hand. "And," he continued, "if you happen to see a cheap picture of the kaiser buy it so that you can point it to and say, 'I once saved that poor man from starvation.'"

Riddles.

Why should an architect make a good actor? Because he is an adept at drawing houses.

When was wit a father? When a pun became apparent (a parent).

Why is an elephant different from other animals? Because if you cut off his head and tail you don't take it from his trunk.

What grows the less tired the longer it works? An auto wheel.

What sea would a seasick person like to be on? Adriatic (a dry attic).

What kind of a cat lives in a library? A cat-alogue.

Why are these riddles like monkeys? Because they are farfetched and full of nonsense.

The Word Fiasco.

When a play or performance turns out badly or any cherished plan meets with failure we call it a fiasco. Fiasco is the Italian word for bottle or flask, and at first glance the word bottle seems hardly to fit the meaning we imply. But the use of this word came about logically enough.

When the Venetian glassblowers, in making their beautiful glassware, detected a flaw in the bulb they would convert it into an ordinary bottle or flask. In this way the word bottle came to be synonymous with failure.

Not Magical.

How can you draw a circle around a person placed in the center of a room so that he will not be able to jump out of it, though his legs should be free? Draw it around his body.

Beauty and Borax.

To remove the shiny look common to some complexions add a pinch of borax to the water in which the face is bathed. A weak solution of borax is highly recommended as a wash for sore eyes, redness of the edges of the lids and for tired and smarting eyes. The same solution is also an excellent mouth wash. It is a healing lotion for slight cuts and scratches.

To soften and whiten the hands bathe them in moderately warm water to which a good sized pinch of borax has been added.

To remove the odor of perspiration use borax with a powder puff under the arms after bathing. A solution of borax and bicarbonate of soda, used as a wash for face, neck, arms and hands when going out and returning to the house and especially when visiting the sick, is considered very efficacious in warding off contagious diseases.

If the water for bathing is hard the addition of a little borax will soften it, and a pinch of borax added to the water in which infants are bathed tends to strengthen the skin and prevent chafing. The strength of the solution may vary somewhat according to the purpose for which it is to be used. A teaspoonful to a pint of water is not too strong for the most uses, but for infants and very young children it may be made weaker.

Health and Beauty.

It will be absolutely necessary for you to get a good rear view of your hat as well as a front view. Don't count any minute wasted that is spent at the mirror when purchasing a hat. Look at it from every angle. You will gain much pleasure in wearing a hat that you know is just right and remember its good qualities long after you have forgotten the bill.

Cool baths suit some temperaments and hot baths bring the best results in others. Morning baths act as a tonic for some, and the evening tub is the most appropriate for others. The best thing to do is for each individual to experiment until she has found which seems to have the best effect in her own case and then abide by the rule. Don't make the rule an unbreakable one, however, or you will be laying up trouble for yourself.

If you once get the shower bath habit you will never give it up, so begin tomorrow morning. When using the regular shower be sure to protect the hair with a rubber cap, use pure soap and warm water first; then, when all the soap is rinsed off, rub the body with a handful of sea salt. Shower again with water cool enough to give a pleasurable shock, rub briskly with a coarse towel and a moderately stiff flesh brush and then spray the body with a lotion.

Fine Skin Tonic.

Exercise is a splendid skin tonic. A brisk walk, no matter if in the rain, will freshen the complexion, even as it freshens the flowers, and a simple aperient will do wonders for a muddy skin. It remains for all women to preserve such beauty as they have and to cure the defects which are peculiar to them or that time has wrought. Every skin is different and must be treated accordingly, and it takes a reasoning woman to experiment carefully and find out the proper method of treatment for her skin.

Lack of sleep ages a woman possibly more than anything else. Most women who are inclined to be nervous require from eight to nine hours. Six or seven hours of rest suffice for others. The hours before midnight contain the magic wherein beauty is dispensed freely. One hour before 12 will do more good than two afterward.

Sleep without a pillow, if possible, or a very small one of couch size.

The feet should be higher than the head. This makes the flow of blood over the heart even. Sleep on your right side, with the limbs outstretched and the arms down at the side rather than over the head, which, it is said, encourages bad dreams.

Starching Humans.

From London comes the news that starch will have the same effect in human laundry as it has upon the family wash. Taken in the bath, it will stiffen the muscles and smooth out the wrinkles of care. Here is the formula for its application:

All you have to do is to buy a pound of ordinary pure starch from your grocer. Then dissolve the starch in a saucenpanful of hot water and pour the solution into a well filled bath of water at a temperature of 95 to 98 degrees, but not exceeding blood heat. Then to take the cure lie down flat in the bath—with all but the face and hair immersed—and remain there for at least twenty minutes. No more hot water must be added or the beneficial effect will be considerably marred. Paris is raving over the stimulating effects of such baths, which impart to the flesh a feeling as though one had bathed in rich cream. A starch bath is restful and soothing to the nerves and leaves a delightful sense of exhilaration for several hours afterward. The bath is best taken before breakfast or before dressing for dinner.

THE SUGAR SCOOP MODEL

Ribbon Hat Trimming
Exceptionally Smart.

PIQUANT SHAPE OF THE SEASON.

The piquant face with small features is the only type that looks well in the hat illustrated, which is an adaptation of the minnie shape that Frenchwomen adore. In order to make it more becoming to American women the brim in front is often broken, but in this model the tilt over the face is perfectly flat, and the high flare at the back is filled in with a huge black moire bow.

Ribbon, preferably moire, is used to trim most of these saucy little hats. Loops of ribbon are an easy method of obtaining height, and arranged against the upturned brim in the back they are generally becoming.

Small clusters of bright colored, unnatural looking fruit give the desired touch of color to many of these shapes, and the confection in the cut has a few reddish purple plums for a garniture.

Women Healthier Than Men.

Professor Doctor Elster of Jena has sprung into fame, like Byron, in a single night, because he said "peekaboo" blouses, corsets, décollete dresses and split skirts did more good than harm. Their influence, he argued, was mainly mental. They brought variety and interest into a woman's life.

Professor Elster produces as trump card the fact that women, victims of fashion, have a higher longevity rate and a lower morbidity rate than men, who are free from fashion's bane. The exposure of parts of the body entailed by fashion makes women hardy. "If fashion exposure really caused disease, then women in particular would suffer more than men in particular from the diseases which begin with a cold; but, as a fact, women suffer far less than men from bronchitis, catarrh, inflammation of the lungs and consumption."

Dr. Elster further justifies against the hygienomaniacs the corset and the high heeled shoe. The corset distributes certain bodily pressures, and "it has never been shown in what way the high heeled shoe is bad for the health. It might be argued that such shoes render a service, inasmuch as they keep thin soles out of the wet."

A Furry Suggestion.

The long fur coat will not be seen in the land of the modish this winter, so say the furriers, and in its stead will reign the smart little hip wrap, which is very dressy, and to a slender figure very becoming.

Pictured is a short afternoon wrap of baby carnal fur. The new full lines give grace and ease to the garment. A deep shawl collar of satin sets off the smaller collar of fur.

Het Vinegar In Sauces.

If hot vinegar is used instead of cold when making meat sauce, it will greatly improve the flavor and give the sauce a better color.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE

BIBLE STUDY - ON - GRAVES OF GREEDINESS.

Numbers 11:4-34—Oct. 5.

"The supplication of a righteous man availeth much in its working."—James 5:16.

THE Israelites remained at Mt. Sinai about a year, learning important lessons. The Tabernacle was set up as a meeting place between God and the people. God was represented by the pillar of cloud resting upon its top, and at night flaming like a torch.

God's presence within the Tabernacle was seen only by Moses and Aaron, in connection with their privileged services. He was represented by the Shekinah brightness upon the Mercy Seat. Thus the Tabernacle became the center of the nation's life and interest in relation to God, who communicated to them through the mediator of the Law Covenant—Moses.

The Sin of Murmuring.

Those who accept God as their Leader should never murmur—never complain. To do so is to dispute the Divine Wisdom and the Divine promises, and to that extent to break the covenant of faith, obedience and loyalty.

St. Paul reminds us that the murmuring of the Israelites carries such a lesson to us.—Hebrews 3:7-19; 4:1-11.

The Lord's dealings with Israel show us that justice, love, mercy, loyalty to God and to principle are in the Divine estimation the highest qualities, and their violation the most serious crime. If we have not looked thus at matters, it behooves us to change our viewpoint and to take the Almighty's.

This murmuring against the Lord was concerning the manna, for which at first the people had been very thankful. They allowed their minds to become so vexed that they wept like children at the thought of the despoils of Egypt, and murmured in desiring to return to the old conditions. Little did they comprehend the situation. Had they returned to bondage, even after a year's freedom, their lot would have seemed more wretched than before.

Moses Too Greatly Burdened.

The result of this murmuring was severe upon Moses. He was the people's representative before the Lord, and the Lord's representative before the people. Heart-broken, he sought the Lord, saying that the burden was too heavy for him to bear.

Then it was that God directed the institution of the Jewish Sanhedrin—seventy Elders, to be the court of judges, responsible to the people, to deal with and to counsel them. While Moses remained head of the nation, the seventy shared his responsibility.

By Divine direction Moses made out the list of these Elders, and requested them to meet him at the Tabernacle. All but two came. There God honored Moses as the head of the nation, and then placed a share of the responsibility upon the 70. This was indicated by their prophesying. Even the two who remained in the Camp prophesied.

Quail In Over-supply.

God then sent word to Israel through Moses that he was about to send them a thirty-days' supply of flesh, such as they had murmured for. Under the Lord's providence, a strong wind drove thousands of quail to the vicinity of the Camp. Two days and nights the people gathered quail.

Agnostics have questioned this statement, thinking it a declaration that birds fell in a solid mass two cubits high. The proper thought is that the birds, driven across the sea, were so fatigued that they flew low, about two cubits (three feet) above the ground, where they could be easily caught.

The murmurers ate so heartily that pestilence broke out among them, a fever from over-eating, called "a fire from the Lord." Many died and were buried there. The place was called Kibroth-Hattaavah—"Graves of Greediness." Thus the Lord permitted the unthankful to cut themselves off from further opportunity for murmuring.

The happiest mental condition conceivable is that which is satisfied with God's appointments. The spirit of discontent looks away from the Heavenly Manna, longing for other food. To such the Lord grants opportunity of feasting to the full on what they crave; but the murmurers cease from being members of His family.

The Bible supplies the Manna of Divine Truth. The Truth needs to be gathered, ground and baked. But it is God's provision, wholesome, nutritious, necessary for our perfecting as God's people. Yet some crave the despoils of Egypt—the world's theories. These God allows to come within their reach. They fill themselves with Higher Criticism and Evolutionary theories, and perish as New Creators.

Greed, selfishness, stands connected with sin of every kind. It leads to every form of immorality, to satisfy its selfish propensities. It leads to injustice and untruthfulness in its endeavor to acquire a large share of God's blessings. It leads to anger, malice, hatred, envy, strife and murder in its endeavor to obtain a superabundant share of this world's goods. Selfishness is thus unrighteousness, and "all unrighteousness is sin."

BUILDING IT UP-SIDE-DOWN

Let everybody in Daly City lay aside all prejudice for once and get down to brass-tacks reasoning on the situation of the city in the present proposition of laying water service mains along Mission road at this time, under conditions that are certainly not calculated to impress business confidence in any way.

In the first place this rush to lay service mains on Mission is beginning at the tail end, or, in other words, shingling your house before the building is erected. Common sense would say, be sure of your water supply first to know if you will have need for these service mains. A fundamental principal of Socialism, by the way, is to begin at the foundation. Hence, the Record's contention is real Socialistic sense.

The argument that these mains must be laid before the State Highway is completed is really no argument at all, for there will remain a three-foot strip on either side of the highway where mains can be put in place at any time, and the State Highway Commission will never object even if they have jurisdiction and the pipe can be laid at any future time when it may be demonstrated that we need them, as cheaply as at present.

Another very questionable objection is that the Contra Costa Construction Company is to do the work and take its pay in bonds to the amount of $10,000, which is the entire amount of bonds that are sold out of the $100,000.

The plans and specifications of the proposed water system, which have never been on file, or even a duplicate of the same, with the city clerk for the inspection of the people as the State law requires, are said to provide for wells as a water supply, yet there has never been even a tested prospect well, to demonstrate that we can get a sufficient supply of water or any at all. We may GUESS that we can get a bountiful supply of water, but an individual would not go about it in that way, and why should Daly City take such a chance.

Another very serious consideration—no work should be started until at least two-thirds or three-fourths of the entire amount of $100,000 is of a certainty available, and the Record would contend for this even if the work was to begin at the wells, where it should, for there is no telling what may happen to retard the progress of our cherished ideas of the municipal water system.

The Record has never been on the wrong side of a progressive movement—was in reality the first advocate of a municipal water system in Daly City—but insists that it shall be constructed on the lines of economic sense.

As for the intimation of City Attorney Morris, that those who have ideas other than the solid three and himself, are "obstructionists," that assertion may be excusable by the fact that he was angry and excited.

"How do you find business these days?" puerried a complaining merchant.—"I advertise for it," replied the busy chap.

The San Mateo Leader (printed in Palo Alto) advertises "the Finest Equipped Printing Plant in San Mateo County"—at Palo Alto, Santa Clara county.

Every day or so we see horses being worked which should be in the circus as living skeletons. Some of these old crows baited toter along so feebly that we expect to see them collapse at any moment. Where's the humane officer?

San Mateo county maintains an efficient corps of motorcycle cops to apprehend auto speeders. There is another class of offenders who should also be arrested, and a motorcycle wouldn't be needed to catch them. These are the people who drive horses which should be in the hospital or the bone yard. Cruelty to animals isn't so spectacular as auto speeding, but it shouldn't be overlooked because it isn't.

More than 100,000,000 pounds of coffee—about half the the words' output—was imported by the United States last year. This allows a little more than one pound per month for each inhabitant, man, woman or child. Besides this we have used a few tons of chicory, burnt bread crumbs, beans, etc., to save nothing of fig flavor and other stuff. Perhaps we are a w leawak nation because the coffee we drink won't let us sleep.

WHY SHOULD THE LAW BE AN ASS?

A magistrate in Philadelphia the other day voiced the opinion that a woman had a right to dress as she pleased and that it was none of the law's concern.

But Philadelphia magistrates don't have to be, and as a matter of fact, most of them aren't, learned in the law.

At about the same time another Dogberry, down in Alabama, was fining a young woman for appearing on the street clad in brother's pantaloons. There, as in many instances, women may "wear the pants" figuratively, but mustn't drape their figures in them literally, lest public morals be hurt.

Yet trousers are a hundred times more comfortable and more sanitary than the new-fangled styles which the law winks at, thereby setting an example for men.

A woman in trousers can get on a street car though the step may be high. She can chase a train with some chance of catching it if it is about to start. In doing so she doesn't mop up microbes or swish a cloud of dust in the nostrils of the passers-by.

Did you ever see a neater, prettier or more becoming costume than Rosiland's in the scene showing the forest of Arden? The law lets her wear that on the stage, but it would pinch the fair actress were she to don the same apparel for a public promenade on the street.

We can't quite follow the law in this. A great journal once ran a series of editorials headed "Why Should the Law Be an Ass?" We give it up. Why should it?

IN THE YEARS TO COME

I see a world where thrones have crumbled and where kings are dust. The aristocracy of idleness has perished from the earth.

I see a world without a slave. Man at last is free. Nature's forces have by science been enslaved. Lightning and light, wind and wave, frost and flame, and all the secret, subtle powers of earth and air are tireless toilers of the human race.

I see a world at peace adorned with every form of human art, with music's myriad voices thrilled while lips are rich with words of truth. A world in which no exile sighs, no prisoner moans; a world on which the gibbet's shadow does not fall; a world where Labor reaps its full reward; where work and worth go hand in hand; where the poor girl, in trying to win bread with the needle—the needle which has been called "the asp for the breast of the poor"—is not driven to the desperate choice of crime or death, of suicide or shame.

I see a world without the beggar's outstretched palm; the miser's heartless, stony stare; the livid lips of lies; the cruel eyes of scorn.

I see a race without disease of flesh or brain—shapely and fair, the married harmony of form and function—and, as I look, life lengthens, joy deepens, love canopies the earth.

And over all, in the great dome, shines the eternal star of hope—Robert G. Ingersoll.

TO TELL MOON'S PHASES

Few people can tell at a glance whether the moon is waxing or waning. Here is a whimsical rule to remember by. It is very simple to those who know Latin and not difficult to those who do not. The first thing to is to notice whether the moon is like D or C—that is, whether the full semicircular curve is on the right or left. If the moon shows a D, that naturally stands for decreasing, "it wanes."

But then comes in the great principle "The moon is always deceitful," and one has to understand the opposite of what the moon says, so that a moon which shows a D is a waxing moon, while a waning moon is like a C.

Those who have no Latin will no doubt look to see whether the moon says it is "decreasing," in which case they will understand that it is waxing, while a waning moon will deny that it is "decreasing."

SOCIAL EVENTS are so interesting to the readers of a local newspaper that the Index and Record is particularly desirous of mentioning them, and we wish everyone to bear this in mind and inform us of everything of that nature coming under their observation, either past or prospective. Please address "Society Editor" and sign your name—not for publication unless you wish it—but as a guarantee of good faith. Such announcements should reach this office not later than 9 P. M. Tuesday of each week, in order to insure insertion.

Anna O'Brien's Birthday

On September 23 Anna O'Brien, the eight-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. O'Brien, 515 Green avenue, had a pleasant birthday party, at which the following little friends of Miss Anna were present: Marjorie Stockton, Alice Matthias, Pauline Johnson, Helen, Sarah and Ruth Moran, Inez Glenn, Muriel Bowman, Florence O'Leary, Gertrude and Lillie Hindricks, Tillie Tomei, Frances and Josephine Foley, Kathleen Moran and the only Anna and Jamie.

DALY CITY DADS

At the adjourned meeting of the Daly City trustees last Monday night three bids were presented for the construction of water mains on Mission street and the bid of the Contra Costa Construction Co. for $8900 was accepted.

A bid was then made for the purchase of $10,000 worth of the water bonds at par and accrued interest, which was accepted.

Mr. Freyer, in the interest of the people, spoke of the matter and suggested that matters of so much importance should be well considered and that at least a week's time should be taken to investigate. But, of course, decency and business sense had no consideration and the solid three voted him down as usual, one of them remarking: "The three ninnies all vote together." It is presumable that he does not know the meaning of the word "nunny," or else is proud of the distinction.

Neither Locke, the bond expert, nor Roberts, the chief engineer, were present. Why not?

H. E. Barker caused quite a stir by asking a few pertinent questions that no one answered. He wanted to know so many things that the people have a right to know, but have not been permitted to know, that City Attorney Morris became real mad and entirely lost the dignity that he has heretofore been accredited with. He denounced everybody who dares to be so presumptuous as to have ideas in conflict with the solid three and himself, dubbing them "obstructionists." He was greeted by applause by a few, whom Barker faced and said, "You are merely job chasers and are here for the purpose of such stuff." "Whom the gods would destroy the first make mad." The ninnies were mad also and one of them vulgarly said: "We do not propose to wait until h—l freezes over to get to doing things," but that was not a surprise, such as Morris losing his head.

Chick, the fellow who bought the bonds, declared that he was not a regular bond purchaser, but had bought the block of $10,000 "to enable the work to proceed." Why this great solicitude of a stranger from the outside buying Daly City bonds, "to enable the work to proceed," unless he is an interested party connected with the Contra Costa Construction Company? If he is, and the indications point that way, then the Record called the turn last week, in saying that it was schemed to have this premature work done and take payment in bonds.

Otto Meyer applied for and was granted a renewal of his liquor license.

A communication from J. N. De Bare, 2440 Mission street, San Francisco, asking information regarding his Mission street sidewalk work, stated that he thought he should have at least the courtesy of an answer, he having written before.

Bloom was granted a permit to lay a water main in Hillcrest, with the stipulation that it went to the city when the municipal water system is installed. Mr. Freyer asked Morris if he had not advised that no permits at all be granted, and the answer was, "Yes—but—"

Carpenters' Local, No. 1913, by the secretary, W. J. Redding, asked the board to consider the advisability of establishing a public telephone booth for the convenience of Daly City people both day and night. The Clerk was instructed to confer with the telephone company.

The matter of excessive assessment of the Crocker Estate Company's acreage came up and Attorney J. F. Shuman stated that the 113½ acres, assessed at $120,000, was entirely beyond reason, and then called Mr. Rosencrantz, manager of the Crocker Estate properties, to the floor, who stated under oath that the value of this land was about $81,000 and that he would recommend its sale for that amount. The property is nearly all on the wireless station hill and will not be available for subdivision for many years, and some of it never.

The Crocker people stated that they could not stand the levy, and that got the goats of the solid three who will grovel in their own slime by taking back water, or subject the city to an expensive injunction suit, which we will surely lose, to the gain, however, of some pet attorney of the "ridiculously unconstitutional" stripe.

Then, if the Bubblesky-Lungvitch and me-too combination does the crawfish act, what will the little taxpayers who have not the cash to back them think of it when they come to paying their taxes at the rate of 142 per cent more than last year?

THE VOICE

Voice is produced by currents of air vibrating through the vocal cords that are stretched across our "voice box" or larynx. The vocal cords are made of elastic tissue, so wonderfully fine and durable that it puts any man-made elastic to shame. The cords tighten and relax automatically.

When they are tight, the current of air that strikes them makes them vibrate to produce a high tone. When they are relaxed, a low tone is produced, just as in a violin string. The box that contains the vocal cords is made of cartilage and lies in the forward part of the throat. It is sometimes visible and is called the "Adam's apple." Behind the larynx is the entrance to the gullet, which leads to the stomach. The danger of having food or liquid enter the larynx instead of the gullet is admirably taken care of by nature. The larynx has a little hinged cover also of cartilage. It is called the epiglottis. Every time we swallow the epiglottis closes over the larynx. In old age the cartilages harden and the tissues grow less elastic. This is why an "old voice" is easily distinguishable from a young one.

Oakland Defeated San Bruno

The Greater Oakland and San Bruno teams crossed bats at San Bruno Sunday, resulting in a victory for the visitors by a 7 to 5 score. King, the Oakland white hope, who pitched for San Bruno, was knocked out of the box in three innings. The feature of the game was the hitting of Gordon of Oakland, who in three times at the bat scored a home run, a two-bagger and a single.

Peninsula Tennis Finals

The Peninsula Club of San Mateo held the finals of the tennis tournament last Sunday, when Wescott defeated Lee on the high school courts. A handsome silver trophy was donated by the Club members for the one who wins three tournaments in succession. This is Wescott's third victory and the cup was turned over to him when he won the deciding match last Sunday. Wescott, who is engaged to Miss Elsie Martin of San Mateo, was one of the Club's first members. The wedding will probably take place in the near future.

Official Visitation

Great Pocahontas Emma Wedemeyer made her official visitation to Owenee Council, Degree of Pocahontas, of San Mateo last Friday night. She was accompanied by Great First Scout Emma Rice and Past Great Pocahontas Margaret Booth of San Mateo and Kate Adams of San Francisco.

The tepee was artistically decorated with flowers and greens and was a bower of beauty. The committee on decoration, Mrs. Maguire, Mrs. Alt, Mrs. M. McIlwain, Harry Alt and Chas. McIlwain, is to be congratulated for its good work.

After the business meeting "corn and venison" were served in the banquet hall, to which all did full justice. The following were the refreshment committee: Mrs. Font, Mrs. Burwell, Mrs. Belchor and Miss May Maguire.

Ardolph L. Kline, New Mayor of New York City.

© 1913, by American Press Association.

Ardolph Loges Kline, who succeeded the late William J. Gaynor as mayor of New York, is an organization Republican. His term of office will expire Jan. 1, 1914.

In half a century New York has had only four Republican mayors.

He was for many years colonel of the Fourteenth regiment of Brooklyn. He enlisted in that regiment as a private and had risen by his natural abilities and popularity to the lieutenant colonelship before the war with Spain, in which he enlisted, went to the front with the regiment and was promoted to a brevet brigadier generalship.

The new mayor has served several terms as alderman from Brooklyn and for a time was assistant appraiser of the port of New York by appointment of President Roosevelt. In 1911 he was again elected alderman from Brooklyn, and when the board reorganized in 1912 he was chosen vice chairman by the fusion members.

When the president of the board, John Purroy Mitchel, resigned on June 7 the vice chairman automatically became president. As the charter of New York city provides that the president of the board of aldermen shall succeed to the mayoralty in the event of a vacancy, Colonel Kline became mayor when Mr. Gaynor died.

New York city's chief executive is a native of New Jersey, fifty-five years old, and is of German descent on his father's side and Scotch-Irish on his mother's.

related to the distinguished Hale family of New England and the Bayards of Delaware. Born to wealth, he was educated at Harvard and the Episcopal Theological seminary at Cambridge.

He was ordained as rector of the Middleboro (Mass.) Episcopal church in 1894 and five years later went to Ardmore, Pa. In 1900 he retired from the pulpit and became managing editor of the Cosmopolitan Magazine and from 1903 to 1907 was managing editor of the Philadelphia Ledger. Since then he has been a writer and traveler.

Five years ago Dr. Hale was the central figure in an episode that kicked up a rumpus in the German reichstag. It resulted from the "suppressed" interview given by the kaiser, in which the latter is reported to have said many things not likely to make for international peace.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Mirror Drawing.

Do you think you know how to draw? Before you decide please make this test. You will need a sheet of paper, a mirror about the width of the paper, a pencil and another sheet of paper or a large card or book.

Lay the paper flat on the table. Then prop up the mirror at one side of the paper so that it is at right angles with the paper and reflects it. Now take the extra sheet of paper in your left hand and hold it so that it is between your eyes and the piece of paper which is lying on the table. You must hold the piece of paper in your left hand so that you cannot see the paper that is lying on the table except in the mirror.

You are now ready to begin drawing. It should be some simple object which can be shown by a few straight lines, such as a kite, an envelope, an open book, a box, etc. You draw with your right hand, holding the paper in your left, so that you cannot see what you are making except in the mirror. Watch the mirror all the time until the drawing is done. You will be surprised at the result.

Warning.

This is an outdoor game for boys. One boy, called the "cock," draws a line on the ground at one end of the field or playground. This line is his boundary, and while he is there no one can meddle with him. He clasps his hands before him, calls out "Warning!" or "Warning once, warning twice; a bushel of wheat and a bushel of rice; when the cock crows, out jump I." Then with his hands clasped he jumps out and runs after the others, trying to touch one.

If he unclasps his hands, or if they are pulled apart he must run into bounds as fast as possible, as any one who catches him must be carried pick-a-back by him into bounds, and both then sally out, clasping hands, and try to catch a third in the same way.

Each time one, called a "chick," is caught he, as well as those who started from bounds, may be ridden "home," and if the cock and chicks lose hands they also may be ridden home if caught.

Ship Alphabet.

The players sit in a long row as if in class at school. The one who acts as schoolmaster asks sharply, beginning at one end, "The name of the letter?" "A," says the first player. The schoolmaster turns to the next player. "The name of the ship?" and begins to count ten, very quickly and sternly. "Andromeda" is perhaps called out before he reaches that number. "The name of the captain?" "Allan." "What is the cargo?" "Apples." "The port she comes from?" "Amsterdam." "The port she is bound for?" "Amboy." "The next letter?" "B," and so on. If the schoolmaster is very strict and abrupt with his questions and counting he can drive every idea from the mind of the person he points at. If he counts ten before an answer comes he passes on to the next and the next until the answer is given. The one who gives it moves up above those who fail. The game should be played very rapidly.

Pigments For Paints.

Mummies are usually preserved in the finest bitumen, and this ancient bitumen has in the course of centuries turned the mummies a leathery brown tint. It has been found that when the bitumen and the shreds of mummy are ground down by machinery a beautiful brown pigment is the result, exactly the tint required for painting certain shades of brown hair.

Sepia is one of the commonest of artists' paints. It is a deep brown in color and comes from a source equally strange. It is prepared from the black, ink fluid discharged by the cuttlefish to blind and baffles its enemies.

Prussian blue is prepared from horses' hoofs and is made by fusing the hoofs with potassium carbonate.

Raw sienna is soil from near Siena, in Italy. Burnt sienna, another common tint, is simply the same earth burnt.

Why He Yawned.

Little John, aged three and one-half, was anxious to sit up one evening and talk with the company, but when 8:30 came mamma said, "Come, John. It is time little men were abed; you have been yawning since 7 o'clock." Indignantly the little fellow replied, "Oh, mamma, didn't you know I was only letting in fresh air?"

A Weak Engine.

The train, a local passenger, was stopping frequently. Finally, at a railroad crossing where it stopped to whistle, a little boy about five years old remarked, "Gee, it has to stop to whistle!"

The Sandman's Garden.

Dear little old sandman,
In soft grayish tweeds,
Out in your garden
Pulling the weeds,

We know who you are—
The sandman, we know,
And what kind of flowers
In your garden grow.

Popples of scarlet
And purple and gold,
Each with a dream
In its petals to hold.

After the twilight
When we're tired of our play
We just love to slip
To your garden away.

So, little old man,
When you see the first star
Please leave the gate
Of your garden ajar.

Wonderful Likeness Found in the Czar's Daughters.

GRAND DUCHESS OLGA (ON THE LEFT) AND GRAND DUCHESS TATIANA.

Glance at this picture of the czar of Russia's two daughters, Grand Duchess Olga and Grand Duchess Tatiana, and you will at once observe the wonderful likeness that exists between the two sisters. Grand Duchess Olga, the older of the two girls, is said to be engaged to Prince Charles of Romania, although the lady herself exclaimed, when recently shown a portrait of her suitor: "His face is enough for me. I don't want to hear anything more about him."

The czar is not anxious for the Romanian alliance, but force of circumstances favors it. The personality of the prince is not attractive, and his education leaves much to be desired. The preference of the Duchess Olga is for her cousin, Grand Duke Dimitri Pavlovitch, whom she vows to marry at all costs.

The Grand Duchess Olga, although not quite eighteen, is developing into a very handsome woman. She cuts a particularly dashing figure in the uniform of her father's hussars, of which she is colonel. The Grand Duchess Tatiana is colonel of the Uhlans.

New Ideas For the House.

If simplicity were chosen as the watchword in furnishing the average home its occupants would be better pleased with its aspect than they often are with many a room known so well to everybody, overburdened with "things" and a hodgepodge of colorings. Fancy a lovely pink evening gown with a background of a red wall and a floor covering that sends not less than half a dozen color impressions at once to the eye.

Some big American department stores have suits of rooms set apart with furnishings, walls, coverings, etc., that suggest artistic and practical ways of remodeling rooms in one's own home. The cost of such an improvement can be made commensurate with one's pocketbook, while the idea is what one is looking for.

Decorators have exploited brown as a fundamental color note until brown rooms are very general, but nevertheless less inviting. A living room in a simple country home carries out a scheme of decoration in browns well worth reproducing. The wall paper is a plain one in a warm tan that verges on a coffee color. The ceiling is not white, but perceptibly cream in tint, and the color is brought down eighteen inches on the side walls, where a small cream enameled picture molding separates it from the paper.

Curtains for the windows are made of wide scrim hemstitched and hanging only three or four inches below the sills from a small rod over which they are shirred at the top. The floor is covered with plain brown woolen "rugs" costing 75 cents per yard. Rugs having some old blue and dark red in them give life to the room, as do the flowered chintz cushions and pillows. The woodwork of the room is painted light cream color.

Autumn Fashions.

Tailors have begun to arrange skirts in such a fashion as to give more freedom to the limbs while preserving the closely fitting line. Serges are still trimmed with black mohair braid in much the same way as they were last year, with this one difference, that the braiding is massed upon the back between the shoulders, and again at and below the waist. In fact, many of the new coats in other materials have this characteristic. Skirts are braided in straight lines, sometimes ending in little tassels very daintily placed.

Skirts Nearly All Short.

Practically all of the skirts are short, revealing the feet and ankles. They are so narrow at the hem that slashing is essential, and the line being thus broken is practically always uneven. A straight hem is absolutely old fashioned, says the Dry Goods Economist.

The skirts may be slashed in the front or on either side or at the back. When the slashing is very high the space is filled with platings or draperies of transparent material.

A Frenchy Caprice.

A French nightgown seen at a lingerie shop has an ingenious contrivance for fastening a bow to it. There is a loop of buttonhole thread through which the ribbon may be drawn and tied into a bow. When the garment is to be washed the ribbon is simply untied. Since seeing this the girls have stopped sewing the made bows on their washable underwear.

AGamin's Romance

It Illustrates the Adage "A Bad Beginning Makes a Good Ending."

By ELIZABETH WEED

Little Tim Cosgrove was a newspaper boy. Tim had a very indistinct memory of his antecedents—a vague picture of a comfortable home with a woman who cared for him, putting him to bed, dressing and undressing him and now and again hugging him to sleep in her arms. But by the time he was ten years old all remembrance of her features had passed away from him, and there was no well defined link between that period and his selling papers whereby to make a living.

One day when the weather was hot and succumbed to the heat and fell on the sidewalk. There he lay, his newspapers scattered about him, till a policeman came along and, calling on an ambulance, sent him to a children's hospital. Tim came out of his collapse and one day was put on a steamer with a lot of other invalid children and sent off on the water. Beside him on the boat sat a little girl about his own age who fell to talking with him. Like Tim, she could remember a pleasant home, and more distinctly. She could recall an old fashioned house, with four pillars before it, in the center of beautiful grounds. One thing was indelibly stamped on her mind—her father being carried out to a cemetery. She did not know the reason why, but she and her mother left the big house, and then her mother was carried to a cemetery too. Later transitions came so rapidly that she could not remember them all, but her clothes were wearing out, and she did not get new ones. She was often hungry and did not have pennies to spend for candy. She was now living at an orphan asylum, but she longed to get away from it, for she was kept shut in most of the time, she said, and she pined for freedom.

Presently the boat landed at an island, and the children were put ashore and permitted to wander in a wood, or, better still, on the shore. At noon a luncheon was served on tables under the trees. Tim and his new found friend—Alice, she said her name was—played together, both preferring the shore.

In the afternoon the steamer with its load of children returned to the city. Tim told Alice of the life he led and said that if she would like to join him and sell papers as he did he would give her some of his stock. He made his home with a woman named Murphy, to whom he paid what he could for his board. She was a kind woman, and he thought she would take in Alice too. The little girl, agreeing to go back to the asylum, agreed when they made a landing to slip away with Tim and cast her fortunes with him as a newsgirl.

Alice was received under protest by the woman with whom Tim made his home. She strongly advised the child to return to the asylum, but Alice begged to be kept and said she would sell papers like Tim to pay for her keeping. So Mrs. Murphy consented. Being a pretty child, Alice readily gained customers and soon sold more papers than Tim. But Tim looked after the finances, and soon the two, besides paying for their necessities, were laying up money. The accumulative principle was strong in the boy, and he was destined to become rich.

One day while Tim and Alice were on a much frequented street corner selling papers a man across the street beckoned to Alice to come over to him with a paper. Several other gamins started to get ahead of her. She became reckless in the race, was knocked down by a wagon and lay insensible. Tim saw her and, throwing down his papers, ran to her, took her up in his arms and carried her to the sidewalk.

Alice was taken home—that is, to the only home she knew. The day ended and she did not recover consciousness. Another day and another, a week, a month, went by, and still she did not awaken, for her condition seemed rather that of sleep than what is called comatose. There is recorded a case of a person lying eleven years in such a condition, and the next longest case is that of little Alice, who lay nine years in constant slumber.

Let us pass over this gap in her life as she passed it, without taking cognizance of it, to the awakening. It occurred in the morning about 10 o'clock. For some time previous, so she has said, she felt a semiconsciousness, but rather as a dream than a reality. Some one was moving about her, opening blinds, arranging things in the room, rubbing furniture with a cloth. This person, though indistinct, seemed to be a woman, a maid, though Alice then did not know this meaning of the word. Then for a time all was silent.

The awakening came by degrees. Alice remembers trying to throw off sleep, realizing that she must get up and be at her post selling papers. Finally she opened her eyes and was surprised to find herself, instead of in the little wooden box she called her room, in a large, well furnished chamber. She could not grasp the situation or, rather, the connection between it and the past. Her first idea—that natural to a child—was that a fairy had taken her out of her bed and carried her to another, perhaps in a palace.

What confused her most was a faint memory of having been in that same chamber before. She attempted to sit up in bed, but found it so difficult that she desisted. But she managed to turn on her side and looked straight into a mirror in the door of a wardrobe.

What did it mean? That reflection was not her own. It was the reflection of a young woman. She glanced at her body as it appeared under the bedclothes and saw that it was not the body of a child. It extended from the headboard nearly to the footboard. Turning again to the image in the mirror, she looked at the features. She opened and shut her eyes, moved her lips, to determine if it were her own reflection. It certainly was the reflection of the person lying on the bed, but that person could not possibly be herself, the child Alice. She was becoming frightened at these incongruities when the door opened and a maid stepped into the room. She looked at Alice with surprise depicted on every feature. Alice looked at her as one bewildered. The maid turned and ran out of the room.

She was gone only a few moments when she returned with a woman who looked for all the world like Mrs. Murphy, though Mrs. Murphy's hair was brown and this woman's was grizzled gray. Nevertheless she ran to the bed and folded Alice in her arms. But, seeing the bewildered expression on the girl's face, she said quickly:

"Don't excite yourself. There's been a great change, but it's all well. You have made us all happy by awakening."

"Have I been long asleep? What does it all mean? Who am I? I'm not a little girl any more."

The woman soothed her and little by little gave her enough of the story to make her aware of the fact that long before she had been knocked down by a wagon in the street and had remained unconscious for a number of years.

"But what means this other change?" asked Alice. "Where am I? This room seems familiar to me. How did I come here?"

"Tim will tell you about that. You must remember that Tim is not now a little boy any more than you are a little girl. He has grown to be a fine young man. But no more at present. The doctor told us recently that you were showing signs of awakening and said that if you did awake you must be handled very carefully."

"Where is Tim?"

"He has been sent for and will be here directly."

"Does he still sell papers?"

A smile came and went quickly over the woman's features as she replied: "Oh, no. Tim hasn't sold papers for a long time. He owns a newspaper himself. Few men of his age have ever succeeded as he has succeeded. But you must hear that from him."

There was a tap at the door, and it was pushed open, and a man who looked to be nearly thirty, though he was but twenty-two, entered the room with an expression of intense happiness on his face, which, when he saw the sleeper awakened, broke into a joyful smile.

"Alice!" he exclaimed.

She lay looking at him in wonder for awhile, then asked:

"Can you be Tim?"

"I am Tim."

"Then tell me," she added presently, "how I came here."

"It is a long story, and I have been warned to condense it. You remember the money we had saved before you were injured?"

"It was $37.42."

"It is now as many thousands. But I must be brief. I went to the asylum you left to come with me and learned there all about you, including your former home. I resolved to buy it for you and succeeded in doing so only a few months ago. You are in the home where you were born and lived till misfortune overtook your family. The second happiest day in my life was when I received the deed for it made out in your name. The happiest day is this at seeing you awakened."

She found strength to put out her hand, and as Tim grasped it he knew the love that had been growing within him for years would be returned.

THE FAVORED.

LIFE gave him hours of labor long
With guerdons frail and few,
And Fate no gift of precious song
For cheer the gray years through,
But God, who knew how soon the charm
Of such gifts may depart,
Gave him the greatest gift of all—
A happy heart.

HE found much bitter in the cup
That he was forced to drain.
When morning's sun rose brightly up
It often set with rain.
When Fortune seemed to wander near
She came but to depart,
For he had what she could not give—
A happy heart.

—Arthur Wallace Peach.

CHANGE THE SUBJECT.

WHEN the troubles of life assail
you
And the morrow looks bitter
and drear;
When no prayers and no hope
A path that is better and clear—
Change the subject and take up another,
You'll find this was the best.
Count your fellow man as a brother
And lay the old trouble to rest.

No trials of life were ever mended
By worry and fret and care.
New thoughts and new hopes have befriended
A man in the depths of despair.
Change the subject and barter your sorrow

For a task that is newer and bright,
And the dawn of the sun on the morrow
Will clear the dark shadows of night.

No life was ever free from despairing;
There are worries assailing us all,
But the pains that are smarting and tearing
The heart will grow lesser and small.

When the subject is changed for another
You'll find this way is the best:
Count your fellow man as a brother
And lay the old trouble to rest.

—Horace Seymour Keller.

THE BEST OF FRIENDS.

THERE are no friends like old friends
To help us with the load
That all must bear who journey
O'er life's uneven road.
And when unconquered sorrows
The weary hours invest
The kindly words of old friends
Are always found the best.

THERE are no friends like old friends
To calm our frequent fears
When shadows fall and deepen
Through life's declining years,
And when our faltering footsteps
Approach the great divide
We'll long to meet the old friends
Who wait on the other side.

THE CLODBURST.

Born mid the crags and spires
Of the lofty mountain peak,
Born mid the lightning's fires,
The dusty plains I seek.

Down through the forest spaces
I rush like an angry steed;
'Tis the maddest of all mad races,
Let those in my path take heed.

Where are the bonds to hold me?
Over the banks I foam.
Away from the heights that foaled
me
I dash for my sea salt home.

In vain shall they try to head me.
My course is clear o'er the plain.
Mark how the bravest dread me—
The avalanche of the rain.

What's the use of standing where
We're in somebody's way?
What's the use of feeling glum
When we might as well feel gay?

What's the use of this and that?
What's the use of now?
What's the use of anything
That's useless anyhow?

—Trenton Gazette.

HOPE.

PRESENTLY the sorrow
Which besets you now
Will be cleared away.
By this time tomorrow
You may wonder how
Care came yesterday.

PRESENTLY the places
That are cold and drear
Will again be fair.
Joy will light the faces
Where today appear
Traces of despair.

PRESENTLY possessing
What you long have sought,
You will think it ill.
But you'll seek some blessing
Other than you've got
And be hopeful still.

—Chicago Record-Herald.

BE STRONG.

BE strong.
We are not here to play, to dream,
to drift.
We have hard work to do and loads to lift.
Shun not the struggle; face it; 'tis God's gift.

Be strong.
Say not the days are evil—who's to blame?
And fold the hands and acquiesce—oh,
shame!
Stand up, speak out, and bravely, in God's name.

Be strong.
It matters not how deep entrenched the wrong.
How hard the battle goes, the day now
long;
Faint not; fight on; tomorrow comes the song.

—Maithe D. Babcock.

THE PIRATE'S LAST BATTLE

The Black Buccaneer, Victim of a Terrible Vengeance.

Nearly 200 years ago two British ships of war were anchored off the settlement of Jamestown, in the colony of Virginia. On board one of them Lieutenant Maynard was awaiting his wife, who was coming out to him from England, it being their intention to settle in the new country. A ship was seen making slow headway up the stream, and Maynard, thinking the vessel to be the Thetis, in which his wife had sailed from London, took a boat and was pulled down to meet her. A terrible shock awaited him. The vessel was not the Thetis, but the Europa, and she brought the news that the former vessel had been captured by Edward Thatch, a pirate, commonly called Blackbeard, and all on board had perished.

Thatch had for some time infested the coast, running his plunder into Bathtown, N. C., where he had gained the protection of the governor by dividing it with him. The governor of Virginia had been appealed to with a view to getting rid of the buccaneer and when this last outrage was perpetrated stood ready to act. He furnished two sloops, the war vessels furnished the crews, and Lieutenant Maynard was placed in command of an expedition to hunt down Blackbeard.

One day in November the sloops weighed anchor and sailed away down the river, followed by the prayers of the sturdy settlers of the town and their comrades on the warships. No one doubted that if Lieutenant Maynard fell in with the demon of the ocean he would either bring him back alive or dead or would never come back himself. And they were right. Maynard had been married but a short time before his ship had sailed from England to a girl he worshipped, and both, being of an adventurous spirit, had laid their plans to make a home in the new world. From the moment he heard of her death he knew but one sensation, and that was to be revenged upon her murderer.

Four days after the expedition sailed the pirates were sighted in an inlet near Bathtown. As it was nightfall Maynard anchored to wait for light by which to get at his enemy. When it came Thatch made an effort to escape, but in doing so ran aground. Maynard saw that he had his enemy at a disadvantage, since, being in a fixed position, he could neither maneuver nor get away. Maynard tried to get near the pirate, but drew too much water. Throwing out the ballast from the sloop in which he was he finally came within close range.

On the pirate's deck stood Thatch. His bushy black beard, from which he derived his name, was tied up with ribbons, the ends of which were thrown over his ears. On his head was a fur cap with a lighted match on either side. Across his shoulders were slung three brace of pistols. In a harsh voice he hurled words of defiance, to which Maynard replied that he would soon board him, which was the only offensive method at his disposal, since he had no guns. The answer from the pirate was a broadside, which put out of the fight twenty of Maynard's crew and nine on his supporting ship.

Maynard, thirsting to get at the demon, ran close up alongside his ship. Suddenly a shower of hand grenades fell on the sloop, and before the crew could recover from the blow Blackbeard and fourteen of his followers were on the British ship's deck.

Maynard and Thatch rushed together. Hand to hand they fought, now with sword, now with pistol. But, since the one barrel weapon of that day was exhausted in a single shot and six of them were but equal to one revolver of the present, it was but a few minutes before nothing remained to them except their swords. Thatch fought for his life, Maynard only for revenge. Time and again he luckily escaped death from his enemy's cutlass. His sword broke, and it seemed that he must fall before Blackbeard's still perfect steel. But he fought on with what remained of his blade, thrusting, cleaving, hacking.

It was a terrible sight, those two men, the one possessed by a demon of cruelty, the other a demon of revenge, struggling in a death grip.

At last the pirate, who had managed to get hold of a loaded pistol, staggering under a dozen wounds, while cocking it fell dead. The end had come, and it had come for the pirates. Every man of them jumped overboard and cried for quarter. They were taken in to be reserved for a different ending.

Five or six days later the settlers of Jamestown and the crews of the warships saw sails down the river, recognized the sloops and waited anxiously the results of the expedition. When they came nearer, on the end of the bowsprit of the foremost vessel was a death's head, the head of Thatch, the pirate, with its ghastly, sunken eyes, its livid flesh, its black beard tied up in ribbons. Then they knew that the lieutenant had wreaked his vengeance.

So much for Blackbeard. What remained was for his crew. When the lieutenant and his men had been congratulated a hangdog looking lot consisting of thirteen pirates were taken out from the hold in irons, rowed ashore and, after a trial distinguished only for its brevity, were swung off at the ends of hempen ropes.

Her companion escaped very slightly injured.

Painters have put the finishing touches on the Foresters' new hall. The dedication of the building will take place on Saturday evening, October 4.

Who Pays Taxes To Keep This Town Going?

By HOLLAND.

WHEN a new bridge is needed, a road must be repaired, a courthouse is to be built, where does the money come from? Do the mail order houses pay it? Hardly. They will not even send a contribution to help buy a bell for the new church or to help a Fourth of July celebration. They pay no taxes in this town, and they are not concerned in its prosperity.

This town must be supported by its residents and those who live in the immediate vicinity. If they insist on sending their money away then they are helping to kill their town, and they are making it harder for them to pay the taxes necessary to maintain local government and to make local improvements.

You owe something to yourself, and you owe something to your neighbors. You can help yourself by helping your neighbors. You can't injure your neighbors without injuring yourself. When you send money to mail order houses you are hurting your town, your neighbors and yourself.

SPEND YOUR MONEY WHERE YOU MAKE IT.
